LAVISH LIVING

INFINITY HOUSE IN KHANDALA BY GA DESIGN

The design language of the villa is contemporary, with both the exterior and interior walls draped in white.

The beauty of the villa is the infinity pool that creates a breathtaking view from the living area.

The house has been built sustainably and employs renewable resources through various techniques. The natural site contours have been used effectively while exploiting the views of the mountains to create an infinity swimming pool that manifests itself as the core of the villa. The design language of the villa is contemporary. Both the exterior and interior walls are draped in white colour and the flooring is finished in white lhasa marble. The whiteness of the villa on the inside and the seamless slabs without beams create a beautiful visual contrast and blur the boundaries of the inside with the lush green garden and foliage of the outside landscape. The beauty of the villa is the infinity pool that creates a breathtaking vista from the living area. The Master Bedroom is cantilevered partially over the swimming pool below and exploits the best views. Conceived as a cantilevered block enclosed by a portal, which is interlocked with the living room extending beyond it, the volume enables the dynamism of the overall design. The interlocking of the three geometries creates an energetic design form that further enhances the vigorous aesthetic. The construction is essentially done in brick and concrete and the walls are 9 inches thick to protect the building from heavy rainfall. Large overhangs, which also serve as decks, protect the inner walls from heavy rains and the summer sun.

The flooring of the sitting area is finished in white lhasa marble.

The wooden floor of the bedroom complements the view of the open space outside.
